

FALL 2007

From the Executive Director

It is my great pleasure to introduce the first edition of Advances in Engineering Education (AEE), ASEE's new electronic publication. AEE's mission is to share significant innovations in engineering education practices, including those presented through creative use of multimedia. AEE will appropriately complement ASEE's scholarly Journal of Engineering Education that has, in recent years, put its focus on engineering research.

Larry Shuman, Professor and Senior Associate Dean at the School of Engineering, University of Pittsburgh, is the editor of AEE. He has assembled a fine editorial board and qualified reviewers. Together they will ensure select standards for this exciting new electronic publication.

We are, indeed, proud of this launch issue of AEE and hope you find the articles that have been rigorously peer reviewed both informative and enjoyable. Should you be inspired (as we hope you will) to write your own article, we invite you to visit URL address to review submission guidelines.

If you have any comments or suggestions, I would, of course, welcome hearing from you.
